

Corrigendum

The following paper in JASEI Vol.2 No.6:

Paper Name: An Assistive Technology in Educational Programming of Visually Impaired

Author: Xinquan YANG

Author's Affiliation: School of Computer and Information Engineering, Heze University, Heze, 274015, China.

Due to the serious duplication with the following paper, it is determined that this paper constitutes plagiarism.

Konecki, M., 2014. GUIDL as an Aiding Technology in Programming Education of Visually Impaired. Journal of Computers, 9(12), pp.2816-2821.

<http://www.jcomputers.us/index.php?m=content&c=index&a=show&catid=151&id=2433>

Here our editorial office The editorial department put forward the following views:

1. Delete the plagiarism paper from our JASEI.
2. The plagiarist is requested to apologize to the copyright owner of the paper, and to bear the consequences.

JASEI also apologize for our mistakes to the paper author and readers. ACSS consistently insists in publishing high level original articles, and commits to the fight against academic misconducts such as plagiarism and multiple submission. We also welcome our readers to join us together in safeguarding the purity of academic papers in our journal.

JASEI Publishing Department